(a) Estimates of settled population have been prepared by adding the recorded natural and migratory increase to the figures of the settled population at the Census of 1931.

Estimates of total population are obtained by adding to the settled population the number of bedouins recorded at the Census of 1931 (66,553).

(b) The distribution by sex of the population at the Census of 1922 is an estimate only.

(c) Revised de facto estimates.

(a) Estimates of settled population have been prepared by adding the recorded natural and migratory increase to the figures of the settled population at the Census of 1931.

Estimates of total population are obtained by adding to the settled population the number of bedouins recorded at the Census of 1931 (66,553).

(b) The distribution by sex of the population at the Census of 1922 is an estimate only.

(c) Revised de facto estimates:

(a) 1922—1931: Revised rates.

(b) During the last few years, many cases of deaths, mainly infant deaths in rural areas, have not been reported. These omissions seriously impair the reliability of child mortality rates and particularly of infant mortality rates.

(a) The rates show for the calendar years 1927 to 1945 the number of children dying during the first year of life out of 1,000 births, during the second year of life out of 1,000 children aged 1, during the third year of life out of 1,000 children aged 2, etc. The number of births and the number of children aged 1, 2, 3, 4 have been obtained by means of weighted averages, as explained in the text.
 (b) During the last few years, many cases of deaths, mainly infant deaths in rural areas, have not been reported. These omissions seriously impair the reliability of child mortality rates and particularly of infant mortality rates.

(a) The survivorship rates for Jews in 1942-1944 have been calculated on the basis of the revised de facto estimate of population.
 (b) Because of the unsatisfactory nature of many of the basic data, these tables should be considered as rough estimates only. Unreliability affects mainly figures for higher ages and those referring to periods far from the census year (1931).
